Reading and Comprehension

Pandas mainly eat bamboos. They will eat meat if they get it. They also eat grasses, vines, roots and may even eat flowers, but their diet is mainly bamboo.

Pandas eat 21 different types of bamboo. They spend up to 16 hours a day eating. One panda can eat 4500 kilograms of bamboo in one year. That's about four times its height and forty times its body weight.

The panda's head is well designed for its diet. The jaws are very strong and can cut through a tough bamboo stalk. The teeth are thick and wide to crush the bamboo and grind it down. Pandas' molars are very broad and flat. The shape of the teeth helps the animals crush the bamboo shoots, leaves, and stems that they eat. They can chomp on bamboo up to one-and-a-half inches thick.

The panda's 'thumb' helps it to grab the bamboo and hold it steady while it eats. The panda strips away the tough outer layer and eats the soft part inside. An adult female panda weighs 200 pounds. Pandas can climb as high as 13,000 feet and are also very good swimmers. Sometimes male pandas relax by doing handstands against trees.

The bamboo stays green even when there are meters of the snow on the ground. Pandas keep eating right through the winter. Unlike bears, they do not hibernate. Pandas grow to between 1.2m and 1.5m, and weigh between 75kg and 135kg. Scientists aren't sure how long pandas live in the wild, but in captivity they live to be around 30 years old.
